Cambridge plastic bag vote imminent

Controversy. Retailers believe banning plastic bags won't solve environmental issues.

A Cambridge City Council vote Monday night could make the city the largest on the East Coast to ban plastic bags.

If adopted, the Plastic Bag Reduction Ordinance would make stores replace disposable plastic bags with recyclable ones.

Cambridge City Councillor Dennis Carlone said the ban would protect local waterways, marine life and reduce waste.

"It's almost silly [the ban] hasn't happened yet," Carlone told Metro. "It's kind of crazy how terrible it is, yet we don't seem to do anything on it. For it to go into another year would be disrespectful to our environment."

Cambridge began investigating the plastic bag ban in 2007, but had little success taking action due to financial concerns from local businesses, Carlone said.

"The benefits far outweigh any additional costs that will be borne by companies. We're not talking about huge expenses here," he said. "It seems very easy to do. I think everyone would say it's common sense."

The Retail Association of Massachusetts says a ban won't correct the problems caused by improper disposal of the bags.

A similar measure went into effect in Brookline in November 2013, though that ban extends to polystyrene containers, too. That same year, lawmakers moved for Massachusetts to be the first state to enact a plastic bag ban, but the measure was stalled.

In 1990, Nantucket became the first U.S. municipality to pass the ban. Great Barrington and Manchester have also banned the bags.

"I don't have a problem with it. I have my groceries in this backpack right now. The plastic bags they're bad for the environment and most grocery stores use paper bags anyway, so I don't see the problem. In Europe, this isn't a problem at all."

Keesler Welch, 29, research administrator

"I'd support a ban. Reducing our carbon footprint is always a good thing. We'd be taking a step toward being more sustainable. And it's not like it's a huge pain to use a paper bag."

Rachel Nations, 19, MIT student

"A lot of people aren't aware that there's a choice to not have a plastic bag after they make a purchase. Anyone who wants to defend a plastic bag with all their honor is a seriously misguided person. There are bigger problems in the world."

Civil rights. Boston protesters aimed to be disruptive, Gov. Patrick says

Gov. Deval Patrick said some civil rights protesters in Boston over the weekend "weren't interested in engagement because part of the point was to be disruptive."

Police arrested 23 people on Saturday who tried to block Rte 93.

They could be arraigned as early as Monday. All face disorderly conduct charges and one man may be charged with assault and battery on a police officer.

"I think it does beg some questions," Gov. Deval Patrick said Sunday on CNN's Face the Nation. "What is it we're trying to accomplish beyond disruption?"

Gov. Patrick, the country's only sitting black governor, said on CNN's State of the Union on Sunday, "We went to great lengths to try to connect with the organizers to the extent they were organized to get a sense of what they needed so that we could accommodate the protests and respect that right."

Weekend marred by murders

Violence. Two shooting incidents and one stabbing occurred between Friday night and Sunday morning.

Police investigate a double shooting which occured in an apartment on Chester Avenue in Chelsea early yesterday morning. One person was killed. Right, Clover City Unisex Barber Shop, the scene of a stabbing. / NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

A 29-year-old man was shot to death in Chelsea early Sunday morning, marking the third slaying in the region in two days.

The Suffolk County District Attorney's office said police are investigating a fatal shooting at a Chester Avenue home, located near Shawmut Street. The incident occurred just after 3 a.m.

Police found two men shot at the scene. One man, a 29-year-old, died from his injuries. The second victim, 34, was rushed to Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston. The identities of both men were not released by state police.

The incident is being investigated by police. No arrests had been announced by press time.

Chelsea Police and the Suffolk DA urged anyone with information regarding the incidents to call Chelsea detectives at 617-466-4843 or leave an anonymous tip at 617-466-4880.

The latest killing followed the Friday night fatal shooting of a 22-year-old Boston man in Randolph. Police found Jameil Williams around 11:30 p.m.; he was taken to a Brockton hospital where he was pronounced dead.

Earlier that same evening, Sean Dwyer, 29, of South Boston was found bleeding from stab wounds about 50 feet away from his Adams Street barber shop in Dorchester.

Police pronounced him dead at the scene around 6:20 p.m.

Dwyer was found in the road by an MBTA bus driver.

As of Sunday press time, no arrests had been made in connection with the Dwyer slaying.

Swatstikas painted on Tufts building

Police are seeking vandals who painted swastikas on the side of a Tufts University building, local press reports said.

The Nazi symbol was seen on Lewis Hall, on the university's Medford campus.

"Such deplorable acts, which are counter to the values of the Tufts community, are deeply concerning. We are taking this incident extremely seriously," the university said in a statement Sunday, The Boston Globe reported. In April 2013, dozens of swastikas were painted onto signs and buildings in Medford, including the school's athletic fields.

University spokesmen did not return calls before press time. METRO

State's first casino expected in July

Gaming. First slots will arrive in Plainville this summer, then MGM and Wynn Resorts will follow by 2017.

Massachusetts Gaming Commission Chairman Stephen Crosby says the state's first casino gaming facility should open this summer.

Appearing Sunday on WCVB's On The Record, Crosby said the slots parlor in Plainville will open in late June or early July.

Two larger casinos licensed in the state – MGM's Springfield proposal and Wynn Resorts plans for Everett – should open in 2017.

Crosby said traffic improvements in Charlestown's Sullivan Square are the biggest hurdle facing Wynn Resorts' plan to convert a polluted former industrial site along the Mystic River in Everett. He said company owner Steve Wynn "will pay whatever it takes, literally whatever it takes, to fix the traffic situation."

Last month, it was revealed the Internal Revenue Service had requested information about Wynn Resorts' safeguards against money laundering.

Wynn has denied it is under investigation. Crosby said federal authorities have not advised the commission of any ongoing probe regarding money-laundering at Wynn Resorts.

Facts

MGM Resorts International plans $800 million resort casino in the South End of Springfield.

- Wynn Resorts plans $1.6 billion destination casino in Everett.
- Penn National Gaming plans $225 million slot-machine parlor in Plainville.
- Applications for first casino is southeast Mass., including the South Coast and Cape Cod and the islands, are due by Feb. 1.

Hostages held in Australia cafe

Prime Minister. Tony Abbott addressed the public about the ongoing situation.

Dozens of hostages were trapped inside a central Sydney cafe on Monday, with local television showing some being forced to hold up a black flag with white Arabic writing in the window, raising fears of an attack linked to Islamic militants.

Prime Minister Tony Abbott, who has warned of militant plans to attack Australian targets, said he was convening a meeting of the cabinet's national security committee for a briefing on the hostage situation at the Lindt Cafe in the country's commercial capital.

"Police are dealing with an armed incident and specialist officers are attempting to make contact [with] those inside a cafe," New South Wales Police said in a statement.

Australia, which is backing the United States and its escalating action against Islamic State in Syria and Iraq, is on high alert for attacks by radicalized Muslims or by homegrown fighters returning from the conflict in the Middle East.

A Lindt executive said there were about 10 staff working at the cafe, Sky Business television reported. Chief Executive Steve Loane also said there were "probably 30 customers" in the cafe, according to Sky Business.

Dozens of heavily armed police surrounded the cafe in Martin Place, home to the Reserve Bank of Australia, commercial banks and close to the New South Wales state parliament.

Television footage showed several people inside the cafe standing with their hands pressed against the windows. The situation was unresolved as of press time.

Hostage crisis

Busy Sydney comes to a standstill

Local media reported that the nearby Sydney Opera House was temporarily evacuated after a suspicious package had been found. A staff member at the world-famous venue said she was still in the building but declined to comment further and police said they were still trying to confirm the incident. Tourists were being let back into the venue by early afternoon.

Trains and buses were stopped and roads were blocked in the area, with train operators saying there had been a bomb threat at Martin Place.

Traders in currency markets said the hostage news may have contributed to a dip in the Australian dollar, which was already under pressure from global risk aversion as oil prices fell. The local currency was pinned at $0.8227, having hit its lowest since mid-2010 last week.

Qantas Airways Ltd., said planes were avoiding flying over the central business district but were landing as normal.

Families of victims in Newtown plan lawsuits

Sandy Hook school shooting. The wrongful death suits do not yet have a target.

Parents of almost half the young children killed by a gunman at an elementary school in Newtown, Connecticut, two years ago on Sunday have taken initial steps toward filing lawsuits tied to one of the deadliest school shootings in U.S. history.

The parents of eight of the children killed in the Dec. 14, 2012, carnage, which 20-year-old gunman Adam Lanza ended by shooting himself dead as he heard police sirens approach, have notified Connecticut courts that they may file wrongful death lawsuits in state or federal court.

Their initial court filings, related to legal entities created in memory of their children, do not indicate who the families could target in their lawsuits, according to a chief court clerk for North Fairfield County Probate Court.

While the parents could not be reached for comment, a spokesman for Bridgeport law firm Koskoff, Koskoff and Bieder said that a lawyer at the firm had recently met with some of the Newtown parents about potential suits.

"Attorney Josh Koskoff has met with parents about legal action," said Geraldo Parrilla, a legal assistant with the firm.

While Newtown grabbed the nation's attention, school shootings remain common across the United States. Some 95 incidents, including fatal and nonfatal assaults, suicides and unintentional shootings have taken place across 33 states since Newtown, according to Everytown for Gun Safety, a group created by the merger of Mayors Against Illegal Guns, founded by former New York Mayor Michael Bloomberg and Moms Demand Action for Gun Sense in America, a group founded after the attack. Sweden. Russian military jet in near collision with Scandinavian jetliner

A Russian military jet nearly collided with a commercial passenger airplane in international airspace near southern Sweden on Friday, Swedish authorities said, but Russia insisted its jet had kept at a safe distance.

Passenger flight SK1755, operated by a unit of Scandinavian airline service SAS from the Danish capital Copenhagen to Poznan in Poland, was diverted by Swedish authorities before a collision occurred, the authorities said.

But Russia's Defence Ministry on Sunday denied its plane had come close to colliding with a civilian airliner, official news agency TASS reported.

"A flight was carried out in strict accordance with international rules on air space and did not violate the borders of other countries and was at a safe distance from the flight paths of civilian airplanes," Defence Ministry spokesman General Major Igor Konashenko was quoted as saying.

Relations between Russia and the West have soured in recent months over Moscow's role in the conflict in Ukraine. Many countries have cited suspected displays of Russian military prowess. REUTERS

Secretary of State. John Kerry will be in Europe today to meet with officials from both sides.

Israel said it hoped the United States would veto any moves at the United Nations to set a time frame for its withdrawal from territory Palestinians seek for state, but a senior U.S. official said it was too early to say.

John Kerry will meet Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu in Rome on Monday to discuss various proposals for a Palestinian state that are circulating at the United Nations.

Later on Monday, Kerry will travel to Paris for talks with European counterparts and then on to London to meet Palestinian chief negotiator Saeb Erekat and a delegation from the Arab League, who will urge the United States not to use its U.N. Security Council veto to block the proposals.

The hastily arranged meetings suggested urgency in America's drive to manage efforts among Security Council members to draft a new proposal before Israeli elections in March. Kerry said on Friday he wanted to defuse tensions during the talks.

In Jerusalem, violence has surged in recent weeks because of a dispute over access to a holy site in an Israeli-annexed part of the city. REUTERS

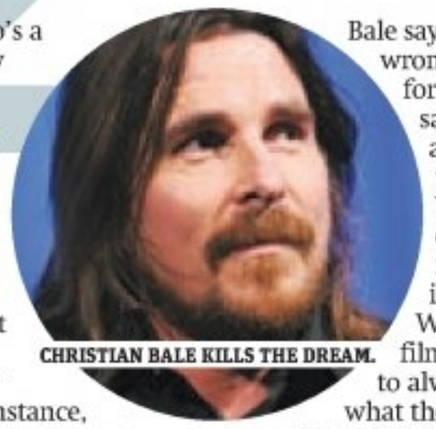
Christian Bale poo-poos fans' 'Dark Knight Rises' theory



CHRISTIAN BALE KILLS THE DREAM.

You know who's a good authority about Christopher Nolan's Batman films? Bruce Wayne himself, Christian Bale, who is happy to set people straight about some of their wilder theories. For instance, there are apparently some fans who believe the ending of "Dark Knight Rises," in which Michael Caine's Alfred sees Bruce Wayne alive and well in Florence, is all a dream. Well, Bale says you're wrong. "That was for real," Bale says during an Entertainment Weekly radio chat. "I find it very interesting. With most films, I tend to always say it's what the audience thinks it is, but my personal opinion is that no, it was not a dream." OK, fine, but what about the ending of "Newsies"? Totally a dream sequence, right?

Hayden Panettiere pops out a daughter

"Nashville" star Hayden Panettiere has a baby girl just in time for Christmas. The pint-sized actress gave birth to daughter Kaya Evdokia Klitschko last week, her first child with much taller fiance Wladimir Klitschko, her rep confirms to People magazine. "We are over the moon and madly in love," the new parents say in a statement. Panettiere and Klitschko announced their engagement in October. No word yet on whether baby Kaya will take after the taller or the shorter side of the family.

Speaking of celebrity birthings, "Guardians of the Galaxy" star and "ecstatic" new mom Zoe Saldana gave birth to twins last week, as reported by the Daily Mirror. The babies — rumored to be twin boys — mark the first children for Saldana and husband Marco Perego. "Zoe and Marco are delighted. Zoe has been ready to drop for some time, and they are both ecstatic to be meeting the twins," a source with a penchant for over-sharing tells the newspaper. Seriously, "ready to drop for some time"? Come on, man, there are more tactful ways to say that.

Now you can get high on the Queen's supply

During "The Queen's Garden," a TV special set to air in the U.K. at Christmas, horticulturist Alan Titchmarsh apparently stumbled upon some magic mushrooms in the gardens of Buckingham Palace. "It's eaten in some cultures for its hallucinogenic effects, but it also makes people who eat it very sick," an ecology professor explains to Titchmarsh, according to the Telegraph. "The old-fashioned thing to do was to feed it to the village idiot, then drink his urine because you get all of the high without any of the sickness." Well then!

But don't get too excited about any Royal Family vision quests just yet. A Palace spokesman was quick to tell the Sun that "fungi from the garden are not used in the Palace kitchen." But man, if they were? That could really liven up the Queen's Christmas Day address. Oh well. Instead, maybe some commoners can sneak in, chow down on the mushrooms and have a great time saying Titchmarsh's name over and over again.

Titchmarsh and the Queen head off to find the village idiot.

The Office: Middle Earth edition

Just in time for "The Hobbit: The Battle of the Five Armies," this week's "Saturday Night Live" host, Martin Freeman, gets two of his most famous roles mashed up together by casting the characters of J.R.R. Tolkein's classic tales in the U.K. version of "The Office," where Freeman first rose to prominence. "What have I been up to? I went on a quest, saved Middle Earth, did the noble thing and turned down loads of treasure. Yeah, so the brave hobbit Bilbo Baggins now works at a paper company," he explains in the intro. "And I drive a Jetta."

1 #BreaktheInternet

Hashtag or no hashtag, I just checked and the Internet remains safely unbroken. But that doesn't mean this image of Kim Kardashian's physics-defying derriere hasn't broken something deep inside of me. Could be my spirit, could be my brain, tough to say. But while Ms. Kardashian may not have broken the Internet, she did successfully sear this image into our collective cultural brain. So ... good job? But do you think the designer of that dress was saddened that we all assumed it was a trash bag at first?

2 The ultimate Oscar selfie

Speaking of breaking the Internet, that's what Academy Awards host Ellen DeGeneres claimed she was trying to do with her star-studded selfie taken during the telecast — or at least she was trying to break Twitter. And DeGeneres' efforts were much more successful than Kardashian's, with the candid photo of DeGeneres along with Jennifer Lawrence, Channing Tatum, Meryl Streep, Julia Roberts, Bradley Cooper, Kevin Spacey, Brad Pitt, Lupita Nyong'o, Lupita Nyong'o's brother and part of Jared Leto becoming the most retweeted photo of all time and grinding Twitter's servers to a halt.

3 Justin Bieber's mug shot

Justin Bieber deserves credit for at least one thing: After starting off 2014 with this ridiculous, glassy-eyed mug shot in Miami after he was arrested for drag-racing, driving under the influence and whiningly resisting arrest, I was pretty sure he wouldn't make it to December without ending up in jail or rehab. While he did manage to juggle multiple pending court cases for a DUI, assaulting a driver and egging his neighbor's house, Canada's little scamp managed to make it out of 2014 unscathed — well, pretty much.

4 Elevator fight

May 5, 2014: The surveillance footage seen round the world. On their way out of a Met Gala after-party, Solange Knowles lunges past sister Beyonce to unleash hell on brother-in-law Jay Z — and TMZ got its hands on the footage. Sadly, much like the rumors of marital strife that swirled around Beyonce and Jay Z all summer, this slap-fight heard round the world may have been faked solely to boost ticket sales for their tour. But whatever, Solange knows how to put on a show — as if her wedding photos alone weren't enough proof of that.

5 Too many cooks

YOUTUBE/ADULT SWIM

Finally just now recovering from the absurd, sinister, TV-inspired trip that was the warped "Adult Swim" viral hit "Too Many Cooks"? Time to fire it up again. There's probably a detail or two you missed, anyway. For instance, can you spot the very first appearance of machete-wielding madman Bill? Look carefully. The blend of '80s TV nostalgia, absurdism and blood-curdling terror became a beautiful pop culture stew to be savored again and again. Team Smarf forever.

6 I'm not famous anymore/#IamSorry

Professionally, 2014 was a mixed bag for Shia LaBeouf. While his full-frontal work in Lars Von Trier's two-part "Nymphomaniac" didn't generate much excitement, his WWII tank drama "Fury" was a bona fide hit. But all that was easily overshadowed by the much more entertaining Shia LaBeouf Show going on throughout the year in Berlin, L.A. and New York. Whether he was using paper bag on his head to announce that he's Not Famous Anymore, having staring contests with strangers in art galleries or getting arrested outside Broadway musicals, LaBeouf was tough to ignore.

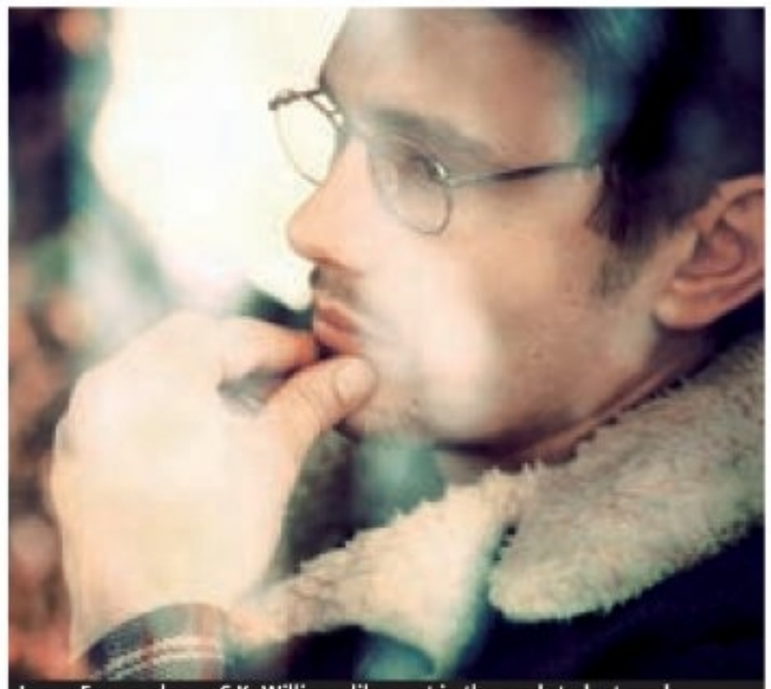
Q&A JAMES FRANCO ON TEACHING AND FILM

Interview. The actor-director-artist somehow found time to teach and get his students to make "The Color of Time."

There's James Franco, entertainer, and James Franco, artist. While he has a new, possibly world-destroying comedy en route Christmas Day — the North Korea-set "The Interview" — he's also busy promoting "The Color of Time," his latest experimental film. While teaching a graduate course in filmmaking at NYU, he asked his 12 students to collaborate on a film based on C.K. Williams' poems. Furthermore, he gave them the chance to direct name actors, including: Jessica Chastain, Mila Kunis and Zach Braff.

What initially motivated you to make this a project for students in your class?
This was a way to bridge worlds — to have students work with experienced, A-list actors and have a real filmmaking experience. I'm really about collaboration, whether it's with people more experienced than I am or less experienced. I liked being free of the commercial concerns that are present in professional filmmaking.

What made you think C.K. Williams' poems would lend well to film?
His poems — or at least these poems [from the book "Tar"] — are very narrative-based. They all center on a central figure, who we interpreted as Williams looking back on moments in his life. That gave us a structure, a character at the center. What I like about these poems is they aren't just about memory; a lot of them are universal. They're about coming of age, being in a relationship, having jobs. But they're seen through a poet's eyes.



James Franco plays a C.K. Williams-like poet in the grad student-made "The Color of Time," now in theaters and on VOD. / STARZ DIGITAL MEDIA

How did the students react to having to direct A-list actors?
One thing I saw happening in some student films was a lack of sense of how much they needed to direct actors. They work with young actors or inexperienced actors, so they have to direct them more than usual. When you work with experienced actors you don't have to do that much. They know what they're doing. For the experienced actors, it was great to go back to a film set where people were still doing it from a very pure place. They were so in love and so in awe of just making a movie that the experienced actors could just go on set and not have to worry about anything but doing their art. No agents, no money deals — just this. They all said it was great.

Both sides

Two-faced

You're constantly jumping between big films and your own experimental projects.
This project was shot at the same time as "Oz the Great and Powerful" — one of the most expensive movies ever made. When you're spending that much money, you don't want to experiment with form or get too artistic in a daring way. With "The Color of Time," we didn't have huge budgets. We had the freedom to try new things, like getting a bunch of directors to make a unified movie.

Awards

Boston Music Awards honors best of the locals

Now that we've officially entered awards season, Boston played its part with the annual Boston Music Awards.

Last night was the 27th edition of the festival, which celebrates musicians with strong New England ties. We're talking groups who actually spent a lot of time around here, rather than, as the BMA site puts it, "John Mayer who went to Berklee for one year."

Performers included Keytar Bear (that guy is having quite the year), Hallelujah the Hills, Jenny Dee + the Delinquents, John Powhida International Airport and many more.

Past honorees include such luminaries as Amanda Palmer, the Dropkick Murphies and Passion Pit, for Best Boston Artist Who Doesn't Live in Boston. Head to www.metro.us to see who the big winners were this year. LISA WEIDENFELD

Review. 'Allergist's Wife' fails to spring to life

See the show through Dec. 20 at the Lyric Stage at 140 Clarendon St. Tickets are $25-$66. Head to www.lyricstage.com for details. / MARK S. HOWARD

"The Tale of the Allergist's Wife" is a smart, funny play that takes a delicious swipe at the core of the well-intentioned, well-heeled residents of Manhattan's Upper West Side.

While the Lyric Stage Company's production of playwright Charles Busch's most mainstream play to date does generate laughs, it's missing the requisite bite that gives this spoof of the faux-sophisticated, liberal elite its gumption.

Director Larry Coen seems to be playing nice with the material, and the result is only intermittently funny.

Ellen Colton's Frieda feels like a South Shore nana in a bad wig. She should look more like the late, great Joan Rivers.

Marina Re settles in nicely as Marjorie after a rocky start, while Joel Colodner captures the God-like ego crisis of the Allergist, Ira. Zaven Ovian delivers a solid performance as their doorman Mohammed.

However, Caroline Lawton's (Marjorie's old friend, Lee) excessive flirtation feels contrived and she ruins a big moment by making the surprise so obvious a child could see it coming.

A play of this nature requires crisp, flawless execution by rigid characters right out of central casting. When they don't deliver, you're left with a play that's smarter than its production. NICK DUSSAULT

HOW TO MAKE YOUR CRITICISM CONSTRUCTIVE

Lately, I find myself getting frustrated and snapping at my husband when he doesn't listen to me or follow up with things I ask him to do; he gets defensive and says I'm too critical.

This is not the way to get things resolved. / DIGITAL VISION

You're not alone. Communication is the key to a healthy relationship — and yet, you'd be surprised how many people don't know how to effectively express themselves, especially if they grew up in homes where self-expression wasn't encouraged or the person with the loudest voice always won.

Fortunately, communication is a skill that can be learned, even as an adult. But like most skills, it takes know-how and practice to get the hang of it. Here are some simple ways to use an "I statement" to improve your chances that what you have to say won't fall on deaf ears.

1 Identify the upsetting behavior. The No. 1 mistake people make is attacking a person's character ("you're so lazy") or lobbing accusations ("you don't care") instead of pointing out the specific offending behavior. Not only do such statements put people on the defensive by suggesting that something is wrong with them, but they don't give the person an opportunity to change. Try expressing yourself by starting like this: "When you show up late to dinner and don't call ahead …"

2 Identify the feeling. This may sound simple, but many people can't distinguish thoughts from feelings. So often, when I ask clients how they feel about someone's behavior, they say things like, "I feel that he's lazy," or "I feel that he's selfish." These are judgments that don't help the other person understand what it's like to be on the receiving end of their actions. If you're not sure about what you're feeling, you can always focus on the five basic emotions: mad, sad, bad, glad and afraid. Like the primary colors, all emotions are an extension or distillation of these fundamental feeling states. Once you've identified the feeling, add the emotion to your sentence: "When you show up late to dinner and don't call ahead, I feel mad."

3 Identify and take ownership of your interpretation of the behavior. This keeps your mind open to the possibility that you may be wrong, which can be a bit tricky because so often we make wrong assumptions about what people's behavior means instead of asking them directly. Such assumptions are usually projections based on fears and old stories from the past. When you own your interpretation, you take responsibility for your reactions, which gives your listener room to stop and reflect on where you're coming from. Here's how you might apply this step to our example: "When you're late, I get sad and mad. The story I tell myself, which may or may not be true, is that you don't care about my needs or my time [just like my mother did when she came late to pick me up at school]."

4 Make a request for the future. This conveys your faith that change is possible and further clarifies your wishes. "When you come late to dinner, I feel mad. The story I tell myself is that you don't care about my time or want to be with me. In the future, I would like you to please be on time."

Be the star of your company holiday party this year

Most important of all, remember to have fun! / DIGITAL VISION

Networking. Now's your time to shine.

It seems like everyone has a horror story about their workplace's annual Christmas party — you don't have to look far to find tales of drunken bosses or regrettable flirtations. But one expert notes that it's also important not to let those stories distract from the fact that the annual winter gathering is also the perfect time to put your best foot forward in terms of your career.

"It's really one of the most important business days of your year," says Patricia Rossi, an etiquette coach and the author of "Everyday Etiquette: How to Navigate 101 Common and Uncommon Social Situations." "It's the one time of the year you can get to someone higher up in the company that you can't get to normally."

Rossi shares these tips on how junior employees can work the room and shine during a holiday party.

Put on a smile and attend

"The first thing you have to do is go," says Rossi. "The company has invested both time and money in organizing it." And this isn't the occasion to be fashionably late or to just stop by for a few minutes either. "Arrive on time, but don't be the last to leave," Rossi advises.

Small talk

Always talk to the spouses

"Your manager is probably going to be bringing a spouse," notes Rossi. "And the spouse is always nervous about attending these things. But if you talk to them and are engaging, on the ride home, she or he will say, 'Oh, I met your employee and they were so lovely, so nice.'"

Don't just talk to your office buddies

"You want to move about the cabin — don't latch onto one person and talk to them all night," says Rossi. For the introverts out there, Rossi says it's also important to remember that almost everyone feels awkward when it comes to holiday parties.

Have conversation topics in your pocket

Because it can be intimidating to approach your company CEO or other high-ranking execs, most employees shy away from doing so. "Have two or three interesting things to talk about," she advises. "If your company VP is a big donor to the [art museum], that means you know they like art." A little research goes a long way.

Entrepreneurship. Balance your day job with your dreams and turn concepts into reality

Time management is key to balancing multiple tasks. / DIGITAL VISION

It's a story familiar to millions of workers around the world: You have an idea that you think would be a great business or product, but you're not sure where to go from there.

"When I got started, I would think and dream about ideas and the only time I really had to daydream was at work," says Ryan Blair, the CEO of the marketing company ViSalus Sciences and the author of the book "Nothing to Lose, Everything to Gain." "There's no such thing as balance — there are 24 hours in a day and most people waste most of them."

We asked Blair for his tips on how to juggle having a day job with a budding entrepreneurial career.

RYAN BLAIR PROVIDED

1 Don't quit your job. "I always recommend including their day job into their plans at first," says Blair. "When you start to see results, then you can think about quitting. I started my first company while I had a job and I got my first customers that way."

2 Put in the effort. Don't think that juggling both work and your entrepreneurial project won't take sacrifice. "In the beginning, I'd wake up early at 4 a.m. and go work on my company before heading to work," says Blair. "Most people don't put in that time."

3 Teach yourself new skills. For people without a strong business background, Blair says it is important to fill in the gaps. "Read books," he says. "That's how I learned it. If you really want to learn, you can read blogs, the trades, social media. You have to self-educate." LAKSHMI GANDHI

Take notes

Keep a journal

"Whenever I'm early in the process [of developing an idea], I'd just start writing about it," says Blair. "I have a venture capital fund and the first thing I do when considering investing in an idea is sketch it out in my journal. Then I'll start talking to people to see if it will work."

Treatment of blacks terrible

Re: 'Lay blame where it's due' (Metro, Dec. 11) Letter writer Delores Paulk is spot-on regarding police violence and the mistreatment of blacks. It is sad when one can predict the outcome of a police encounter based on the race of the civilian. For example, Eric Frein, who killed a Pennsylvania state trooper and wounded another in a September ambush, was able to walk out of his hiding hole without a bullet being fired. In April 2009, Richard Poplawski killed three police officers who were responding to a domestic violence incident in Pittsburgh, but he was able to surrender without being seriously injured. The difference between these two cop killers and Eric Garner, who was killed for selling untaxed cigarettes, was their race. The disparate treatment of blacks by police is reprehensible and should be decried by all law-abiding citizens. It is also a travesty of justice when prosecutors who are tasked with bringing an indictment against thug cops act as defense attorneys instead.

Tragedy no excuse for barbarism

Re: 'For some 9/11 families, torture not a gray area' (Metro New York, Dec. 12-14; Metro .us) The article on 9/11 families having "little sympathy" for torture victims deeply saddens me. Almost 60 years ago, my immigrant grandfather died of injuries sustained in a robbery of his grocery store in Greenwich Village. Suspects were never identified, despite efforts of the NYPD. Nonetheless, I am a lifelong opponent of capital punishment and a staunch advocate of fair and humane law enforcement. While my family's misfortune cannot compare to 9/11, those of us who have suffered crime would do well to uphold nobler principles, including the Geneva Conventions, without which life would be truly barbaric.

Pats continue to cruise as they crush Dolphins

NFL. The Patriots ripped their division rivals, 41-13, Sunday at Gillette as they moved one step closer to the No. 1 seed in the AFC.

In the Bill Belichick-Tom Brady era, Patriots fans rarely have to wait until Christmas Day to feel the holiday joy of a division title.

The Pats again wrapped up the AFC East early, winning their sixth straight division title and 11th in the past 12 years, courtesy of a 41-13 blasting of the Dolphins at Gillette Stadium on Sunday.

The Pats moved to 11-3 on the season and maintained their position as the No. 1 seed in the AFC with two regular season games remaining (at the Jets next Sunday, and vs. Buffalo on Dec. 28).

Ryan Tannehill threw for 346 mostly meaningless yards as the Dolphins were shut out in the second half. Duron Harmon and Patrick Chung each picked off Tannehill, who finished with a 73.5 QB rating. Tannehill was also sacked four times, highlighted by the returning Chandler Jones' 1.5 sacks on the day.

The Pats were dominant in the third quarter, posting 24 points. Brady's first pass of the third was a 34-yard connection to Rob Gronkowski, which set the tone for the big quarter. Gronk hauled in a 27-yard touchdown pass from Brady off a seam route and had a 35-yard reception off a go route late in the third, which set up a six-yard touchdown grab by Julian Edelman. Edelman's score put the Pats up, 38-13, heading to the fourth quarter.

Running back Jonas Gray got his most carries since his 37-attempt, 201-yard day against Indy a month ago as he ran the ball a team-high 11 times for a team-high 62 yards.

Kicker Stephen Gostkowski became the Patriots' all-time leading scorer with his third-quarter field goal, surpassing the man he replaced in 2006 — Adam Vinatieri.

Brady finished the day having completed 21 of 35 for 287 yards with a touchdown and interception. His QB rating was 93.4, the fifth time in six games in which No. 12 hasn't cracked 100.0.

The race to No. 1

Both the Patriots (11-3) and Broncos (11-3) clinched their respective divisions Sunday.

- The Patriots hold the tie-breaker by virtue of their head-to-head win.
- The Broncos are at Cincy in Week 16 before hosting the Raiders in Week 17.

Around the NFL

Buffalo pulled off a stunning victory Sunday, beating Green Bay 21-13, thanks to two Aaron Rodgers interceptions (both by Bacarri Rambo) and a Marcus Thigpen 75-yard punt return. Rodgers also coughed up a fumble that would result in a costly safety with 1:51 remaining.

- Colts 17, Texans 10
Andrew Luck led the Colts to their second straight AFC South title as they overcame an early Texans lead. Neither team eclipsed 290 total yards of offense in the defensive struggle.
- Ravens 20, Jaguars 12
Baltimore (9-5) remains in the thick of things after it earned a needed win over Jacksonville in Week 15. The Ravens did not allow a Jacksonville touchdown, forcing the Jags to four field goals.
- Panthers 19, Buccaneers 17
Carolina didn't have Cam Newton, but it didn't matter, as Derek Anderson threw for 277 yards and a touchdown.
- Bengals 30, Browns 0
Johnny Manziel had a rough go of it in his NFL debut as the rookie threw for just 80 yards and two interceptions in a blowout loss to their rivals. For the Bengals, Jeremy Hill ran for 148 yards and two scores.
- Steelers 27, Falcons 20
Ben Roethlisberger had his way with the Atlanta secondary at the Georgia Dome, throwing for 360 yards. While Le'Veon Bell had only 47 yards on 20 carries, he did find the end zone twice for the Steelers, who upped their record to 9-5.
- Giants 24, Redskins 13
Odell Beckham Jr. continued his stellar play, hauling in 12 receptions for 143 yards and three touchdowns.
- Chiefs 31, Raiders 13
The Chiefs (8-6) remained in the AFC playoff picture, dismissing the Raiders at Arrowhead Stadium. Knile Davis had a rushing and receiving score in the third quarter.

Pats make Dolphins eat words

As a way to motivate his team ahead of Sunday's win over Miami, Patriots head coach Bill Belichick had quotes from Dolphins players displayed throughout the team's training facility last week, according to ESPN. The quotes were made by Miami players following its Week 1 win over the Pats and they reportedly talked of how New England "quit" in the Sept. 7 game.

B's with no urgency, offense is still ugly

NHL. The Bruins have not yet gotten on a roll this season and scoring has been the primary issue.

With 10 days remaining before Christmas and 52 games left in the regular season, it may seem silly for the Bruins to start worrying about the standings this early in the season. Then again, Saturday's 3-2 shootout loss to the Ottawa Senators was yet another example of their season-long, debilitating goal-scoring issue.

The Bruins (15-13-2) fell to 1-4-1 in their last six games and have been held to two goals or fewer in seven of their last nine. This freefall has caused them to tumble down the Atlantic Division ladder, where they currently reside in fifth place, one point ahead of Florida (which has played three less games). If the postseason started today, they would be the seventh seed in the Eastern Conference.

Bruins head coach Claude Julien called their performance against the Senators (12-12-5) "average." Those are the type of games that Boston needs to win, particularly as it enters a three-game road trip this week (they are 6-7-0 away from TD Garden this season).

"We are still struggling to score goals, but there are a lot of other things that could be better," Julien said. "We didn't move the puck in the back end very well."

What's more, Boston blew not one but two leads on home ice (where they had been 9-6-1).

Julien refused to make David Krejci's hip injury an excuse as it may be hard to explain how one player's prolonged absence could ruin an entire team's collective confidence and psyche.

After they surprisingly fired head coach Paul MacLean last week, the Senators entered Saturday's game just 2-7-1 in their last 10 games.

Some positives coming out of their first shootout loss of the season included Craig Cunningham's first NHL goal (shorthanded) and Loui Eriksson finding the back of the net. Frustrating parts for the Bruins were the fact that they had a three-on-one for the second straight game but once again didn't manage to get a shot off.

Milan Lucic is currently on a makeshift line with Chris Kelly and Cunningham, but he helped bring some emotion to Boston with only his second fighting major of the season. Ottawa defenseman Mark Borowiecki took a run at Lucic in the corner (causing his helmet to pop off), so he responded by pounding him into the ice. Fighting has been mostly phased out of the NHL, and even the Bruins' arsenal, but clearly moments like that inspire the fans and Lucic's teammates.

"We can't wait much longer to turn things around," noted Lucic. "We have five games until Christmas break, so we have to get going."

The Bruins are in Nashville on Tuesday, Minnesota on Wednesday and Winnipeg on Friday before returning home on Sunday to take on Buffalo.

Milan Lucic has registered 14 points so far this season. / GETTY IMAGES

By the numbers

The Bruins have scored 76 goals this season, placing them 21st in the league. The top scoring teams in the NHL, the Lightning, Maple Leafs and Islanders are all hovering around 100 goals so far in 2014-15.
